BETTER DIGESTIONS.Women With Gas Ranges Aiding Husband's Stomachs

CINCINNATI, August 17.—Home life in Cincinnati represents a standard any community might well seek to attain, due, for the most part, to particular housewives. They demand the best, as is amply attested in the number of better-than-medium grade establishments of this city, together with its shopping districts of the highest class.

Economy, of course, is an inextricably fixed among the traits of most housewives as is also their inclination to that which makes for happier, more comfortable and healthful homes.

No surer index to appreciation of these features could be found than the kitchen, and there is no indication more certain of a healthful, economical household than the use of the method of cooking which tens of thousands of Cincinnati women have given the stamp of approval—the latter-day gas range.

It is no idle figure of speech to say that the health, strength and happiness of mankind is interwoven with the culinary attainments of the woman at home. It is of vastly more importance than all the sciences of the richly endowed universities combined—a fact that cannot be gainsaid.

In this fact lies the pride of most women in their ability to cook well, a pride that increases with the certainty of results in cooking on a well-made gas stove.

It is a method of cooking that has held the interest of good cooks for the same reason that an expert workman treasures his finest tools.

Hardly a woman who makes the change to a gas stove from older and less pleasant methods but wonders that so many thousands of her sisters should be so much farther advanced in the subject that has been uppermost in the minds of housewives since time began.

As an evidence of the great number of Cincinnati women who recognize the comfort and economy in gas, they would, standing in an unbroken line, cover a distance of 40 miles and almost equal the population of a city the size of Dayton, Ohio.

MINISTER STRICKEN DOWN.

PHILADELPHIA, August 17.—Coming to Philadelphia to temporarily occupy the pulpit of the Chambers-Wiley Presbyterian Church, the Rev. John F. Carson, of Brooklyn, was stricken with appendicitis several days ago and is in a serious condition at his country home at Spring Lake, N. J.

It was said this morning that Dr. Carson was resting easily, but must have absolute quiet.

For the last seven years he has been minister of the Central Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Society of New York, Brooklyn Clerical Union and the Union League, Brooklyn.

WILL RAISE RATES.

Conference of Railroad Men Will Result in Higher Tolls.

TACOMA, August 17.—It is reported on apparently good authority at the recent conference of railroad men plans were made for a general increase in freight rates between Chicago and the Pacific Coast, ranging from two and a half cents to 25 cents a hundred the increase to be effective January 1.

The reasons given are advanced wages, the increased prices on coal and supplies and the reduction of passenger rates, the general attack on railroad securities and the great demand for cars which has forced them to invest large sums in equipment.

TRAIN OVERTURNS.

KANSAS CITY, August 17.—Two rear coaches of Wabash train No. 9, from St. Louis, left the track and overturned at Randolph, Mo., yesterday. Five persons were injured, none seriously.

WAX HEAD IN WATER.Milliner Throws Dummy in Water and Teamsters Gives Alarm.

PORTLAND, August 17.—Early this morning a teamster crossing the Madison-street bridge saw a woman's head bobbing up and down in the uncertain light. He left his wagon, peered over the railing at the object, focused his gaze accurately and decided beyond all possible doubt that it was a woman's head, ghastly in the light of the morning. Then he larruped his team and drove hotly to the coroner's office, where he banged and pounded until a sleepy-eyed assistant appeared, to whom he unfolded his tale of horror.

Things moved right along after that. Three or four stout assistants, a Deputy Coroner and other officials hurried to the river, chartered a launch and began the search for the head, that by this time had bobbed on far down the stream. For four hours the searching party pulled out cabbages, old hats and coats up and down the lower harbor, in among the greasy docks, and under the dark caverns of the wharves. Finally, just as the party was about to disband, one of the men saw the head floating quietly inshore, edging in a dark cross current.

"There she is," he yelled and he jammed down the full-speed lever and whirled the boat around beside the floating head. And reaching down, this eager Deputy Coroner pulling up by its long, luxuriant curls the nice wax head of a milliner's dummy.

The entire town in an hour had heard that the Coroner's office had found the severed head of a beautiful woman, and even now the telephone bells are still ringing at the Coroner's office and relatives of missing folks are besieging the outer rooms, while within an irate Deputy Coroner passes his time howling the true story over the telephone and saying things to a waxon head that sits on the desk at his elbow.

It was announced that no inquest would be held on the remains, but it has not yet been decided whether to cremate or bury the "find."

ZIMMER'S SENTENCE PUT OFF.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 17.—Emil J. Zimmer, vice president of the Pacific States Telephone Company, who was convicted in contempt of court in refusing to answer questions at the first trial of Louis Glass, was to have been sentenced in Judge Lawler's court today. When the case was called his attorney, Charles H. Fairall, stated he was not prepared for an argument on his objections to passing sentence and by consent of counsel the matter was postponed until Tuesday.

Fairall has raised the point that verdict of guilty can not stand as the jury was discharged before it was recorded.

NEW LOGGING ROAD.

KELSO, Wash., August 17.—The Shelvin Timber Co., has a 60-day option on the Tongue Point Railroad which runs out from Carrollton several miles and is used as a logging road. If the Shelvin people buy the road, which is very probable, the line will be extended up the Coweeman nine miles from its present terminus. Once extended it will probably be added to until all the timber on the headwaters of the Coweeman will be tributary to the road. Experience has demonstrated that logs can be handled cheaper and quicker by rail than by water, and in this stage of progressiveness a railroad is the thing to bring logs to market and fill an urgent order for some particular purpose.

MOORS READY TO FIGHT.

CASA BLANCA, August 17.—The situation is quiet here but the Moors expect to attack the camp tonight.

REFUSED HIM MONEY SO SHOOT.

PHILADELPHIA, August 17.—John Dugan shot his sister today because she refused to lend him money.

J. C. Specht, representing Mason, Ehrman & Co., of Portland, came in on the 9:40 train last night and will spend a few days on the beach. Several years ago this part of the country was part of Mr. Specht's territory, though working for another firm and a story is told on him that is amusing. He was a green 'un in the business at that time and when he sent in his first expense account among the items was: "One livey team, Astoria to Ilwaco, $7.50." When he asked for his mail at the next hotel he was handed a collect telegram from the house which read: "Where is the horse and what did you do with the buggy? Why didn't you charter a steamship?" Specht immediately invested in a pocket map.
